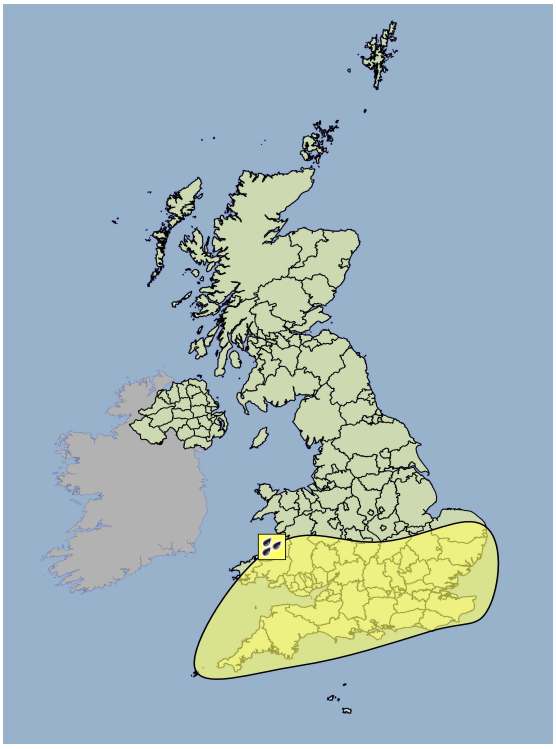
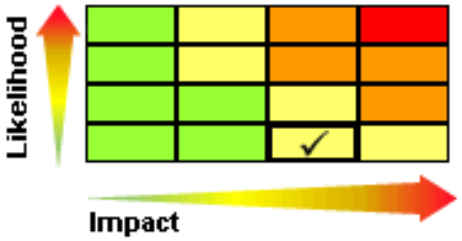
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A slack area of low pressure remains aligned across southern Britain on Saturday, bringing with it moist and deeply unstable air. Daytime heating will again assist the development of heavy showers and thunderstorms, with the focus rather further south than on Friday. These showers and storms are likely to be slow-moving, with scattered localities receiving 15-20 mm of rain in an hour or less, and very locally perhaps 30 to 40 mm in 2 or 3 hours. Hail and lightning will be additional hazards. As is the nature of showers, some places will escape the heavier downpours.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 10:00 on Sat, 28th Jun 2014 until 21:00 on Sat, 28th Jun 2014

Following a lull in activity overnight, further slow-moving thundery downpours will develop during Saturday. This is an update of the warning first issued on Thursday, separating Friday and Saturday, to more clearly differentiate the perceived risks and areas to be affected.

The public should be aware that the downpours may lead to localised surface water flooding and potential disruption to transport and outdoor events.
